Living Room, Kitchen & Bathroom Design

Many of us are aware that our habitats are in need of an update but we often don't know what that update should look like, what it would involve, where to budget and what to splash out on. Our London based clients, a professional couple, experienced the same problem with their one bedroom apartment. Situated in one of London's iconic Brutalist buildings built in the late 60ies, the layout is simple, to the point and serves the clients quite well. We were asked to come up with a refurbishment scheme based on reusing/renovating most of the existing elements and avoid any major building work apart from replacing some of the existing fittings. Areas requiring attention involved living room, kitchen and bathroom, all with issues of their own. In collaboration with our clients we designed a modern, light and cohesive environment that is a perfect mix of their tastes / styles, budget and statement pieces, all working like a balancing act between vividness and calm.

Living Room Design Brief

Our clients sent the plan of their apartment with all the measurements, supporting images of the existing space and a brief with problems to solve for each area.
Here are the Living Room Design Issues / Brief:

- Our living room is drab and tired and the opening towards the kitchen useful but looks like a random cutout
- Loads of books, all taking valuable storage space but we couldn't find any ready made bookshelf to fit nicely, don't know where to place it
- floors inherited laminate, damaged
- old tv, too big but size great for watching movies, can it 'disappear'?
- we need a new 'heirloom' sideboard
- sofa is too hard, otherwise sturdy, needs updating
- coffee/dining table, not the greatest of shades but very practical (and was expensive)
- living room entry door is missing but is not missed
- we need to keep the work station where it is, it also works well
- mini trampoline is in use but is out of place and no space to hide it

Style wise, one of us likes white, light wood, Scandi style and the other dark grey, black, metal and 'industrial-ish'. We have quite a random collection of lamps and small pieces of furniture

As the existing layout works well for the inhabitants, all changes are mostly of decorative or restorative nature. Almost all existing elements are reused in the new interior design scheme and some new added to create a modern and bright space that reflects its owners.

- 1 - Old sofa is reupholstered and softened by a new layer of memory foam, backrest reshaped and new pillows added.

2 - Coffee/Dining table is treated with a new dark veneer.

3 - New ceiling light is a large Habitat's 'Astrid'

4 -To reframe the wall opening and create storage, we designed a bookcase consisting of both open shelving and existing cabinets.
- 5 - Old TV is replaced by Samsung's 'The Frame' so instead of a huge dark rectangle on the wall there is art on display.

6 - New sideboard is from the AcmeD3 furniture collection 'Adam, Eve & the Tree of Knowledge', featuring Eve in blonde wood (any similar would work).

7 - Damaged laminate floor is replaced by limed oak planks

8 - Living room rug is by Gan - 'Alfombra Abstract Plata'

+ DRAWING GUIDELINES

— DRAWING GUIDELINES

FLOOR PLAN DRAWING - a drawing of the floor space as if viewed from above

ELEVATION DRAWING - a view of a wall or an object when facing it. Most walls are simple and do not require any drawings to explain them (apart from denoting their height). Others, especially if we are designing fitted furniture around permanent features, require an elevation drawing with all dimensions.

ELEVATIONS AND PLANS can be:

- a simple hand drawing on a piece of paper showing dimensions, you can scan it or take a photo of it
- a professional technical drawing (formats: DWG, PDF, JPEG, PNG)
- a room plan generated by smart phone apps

For total novices we prepared a little 'How to Instructions' PDF which you can print for reference

PHOTOS OF YOUR SPACE - try to capture all corners and important details of the space you want designed. Videos work great too.

If you cannot supply these, do not worry - they do make our job easier but we can often work without them.

REFERENCE IMAGES - photos of design, art, architecture, landscape, furniture or any design details you like. These can be images taken by yourself, found in books, magazines or various websites like Pinterest - over there you can visit our page, pick what you like and send us a link

Sometimes there is only one solution, sometimes there are three or more - you might be perfectly happy with our first design and no further work will be required.

For more complex cases, two additional design revisions are included in your design fee. Any further revisions incur a cost so carefully consider what best works for you and clearly communicate your feedback.

What is Spatial Design?

As eloquently explained by Wikipedia:

SHORT VERSION: “Spatial design is the glue that joins traditional built environment disciplines together with the people they are designed to serve’.”

EXTENDED VERSION: Spatial design is a relatively new conceptual design discipline that crosses the boundaries of traditional design specialisms such as architecture, landscape architecture, landscape design, interior design and service design as well as certain areas of public art. It focuses upon the flow of people between multiple areas of interior and exterior environments and delivers value and understanding in spaces across both the private and public realm. The emphasis of the discipline is upon working with people and space, particularly looking at the notion of place, also place identity and genius loci. As such the discipline covers a variety of scales, from detailed design of interior spaces to large regional strategies and is largely found within the UK. As a discipline it uses the language of architecture, interior design and landscape architecture to communicate design intentions. Spatial design uses research methods often found in disciplines such as product and service design, as well as social and historical methods that help with the identification and determination of place. Ultimately it can be seen as ‘the glue that joins traditional built environment disciplines together with the people they are designed to serve’.”

How Can You Design My Space Without Visiting?

A so called 'remote design' is a well established method used, among other things, for architectural and design competitions. Project brief and all the necessary details about the site are provided by the client and the more detailed the information, the more comprehensive the final result.

So, our clients will have to provide us with their brief, plans with clear measurement, images or videos of the space that want to work on and reference or inspirational images which can help to establish clients' design style.
